

However in the absence of any other information from the sub-bottom, there is no way of determining whether the minimum sediment thickness as determined from coring is available at the anchor locations, and there is no way of determining the presence or absence of possible sub-bottom drilling hazards such as gas pockets.