

of equilibrium liquid and gas phase volumes were made at several declining pressures. The results of these measurements are given in Table IV.

A portion of the gas phase, remaining at 225°F and 990 psig, the final pressure step of the pressure depletion test, was analyzed. The composition obtained is shown in Table V.